The multidisciplinary Troia Project: Achievements and future prospects

COST workshop organized by the Institut für Ur- und Frühgeschichte
und Archäologie des Mittelalters
University of Tübingen, Germany

28 – 30 October 2006

Abstract: Troy, with its 4,000 years of history, is one of the most famous archaeological sites in the world. The first excavations at the site were undertaken by the famous archaeologist Heinrich Schliemann in 1870. In scientific terms, its extensive remains are the most significant demonstration of the first contact between the civilizations of Anatolia and the Mediterranean world. Moreover, the siege of Troy by Spartan and Achaean warriors from Greece in the 13th or 12th century B.C., immortalized by Homer in the Iliad, has inspired great creative artists throughout the world ever since. The archaeological site of Troy is of immense significance in the understanding of the development of European civilization at a critical stage in its early development. It is, moreover, of exceptional cultural importance because of the profound influence of Homer's Iliad on the creative arts over more than two millennia.

The workshop will summarize and evaluate the results of the third major excavation period led by Manfred Korfmann that was designed as a multidisciplinary endeavour from the beginning. Some 50 experts from 9 different countries will present their latest results and explore the potential for future archaeological and scientific work at the site as well as its cultural management and protection.
